What type of flooring can be used in a sunroom?

As an interior space and an outdoor space, sunrooms have the unique privilege of being one of the select few spaces that can accommodate almost any type of flooring finish. Depending on the type of subfloor system and construction, one could choose to use stone tiles, ceramic tiles, wooden flooring, or carpeting.

How do I choose the best sunroom materials?

Use Cedreo's 3D visualization software to adjust the sun's orientation to preview exactly how natural light will enter the sunroom. Choosing smart materials early in the design process saves time, money, and future maintenance headaches. Best picks: Framing: Thermally broken aluminum or reinforced vinyl has excellent cost-to-performance ratios.

How do you make a small sunroom a Home Office?

Maximize seating in a small sunroom with a chaise longue. Add a small side table and a large floor plant to create a cozy corner reading nook. Build a small sunroom on a large deck to create a bonus space. This sunroom home office includes seating that allows it to double as a gathering spot.
